1. In view of the information contained in the above reference, the guarantee period has expired on nineteen (19) RS-6 radio equipments, serial Nos. 2063 through 3396 of the forty-seven (47) defective units being held by this Agency at the [redacted] Warehouse.

25X1

2. The subject contractor does not believe that he should be required to repair these nineteen (19) units at no cost to the Government. Enclosed herewith is a list of the units in question and the dates they were shipped by the Inspector of Naval Material from Chicago and also the dates they were inspected by the Testing and Evaluation Section, Engineering Division/OC.

3. This past 3 June 1953 this office, after negotiation with [redacted], Testing and Evaluation Section [redacted], Engineering Division/OC [redacted] and Administration and Inspection Branch/PD/LO ([redacted]) agreed that Engineering Division/OC would repair the rejected RS-6 radio units here in lieu of returning them to the contractor. This office was advised 15 February 1954 by the Testing and Evaluation Section ([redacted]) that they repaired about 100 rejected radio sets but they had approximately forty-seven (47) units that they felt should be returned to the contractor for repair or replacement.
